Porthos said it was an honor to be considered, and that the Steel Scorpions were a Guild that upheld the virtues, and fought the evils in the land.

Relik testified as to the worthiness of the Steel Scorpions of Fire, and his knowledge of them.

There were no decenters to this admission.

A vote was taken to admit the Steel Scorpions, and the measure passed with five ayes, and one obstination. Mave Gerhart was again invited to explain why the Dark Order sought admission to the Regency.

Mave Gerhart stated that the Dark Order wished to help maintain Order thru a unified group of guilds...

At this point Arlin the half ogre rushed forward accusing the Dark Order of hiring the assassin that made an attempt on the Queens life, and on the life of Ditto Arnum. Arlin then presented what he claimed was a written confession from a would be assassin, to these facts, to those at the table.

Ishmael attempted to object the Dark Order deligation, upon hearing these accusations. The Dark Order deligation refused to leave...

These charges caused much pandimonum among the crowd.

The council after some dicussion, decided that the letter was a fake.

Walter suggested that the admission vote be held off, until the Dark Order and its actions could be observed more closely. Nazalte agreed with Walter.

Savhanna questioned the Dark Order, as to who their allies were, they claimed that their only offical allie was Parius Deim.

A vote was called and seconded on the matter of the Dark Orders admission.

Lady Powers suggested, that a Fair be held, and sought the support of the council on the matter, all attending thought it was a good idea, and Lady Powers said she would begin the planning of the fair, her estimate was that it would take a couple of months to organize.

At this point questions, statements, and such from the crowd were invited. Lady Ivae, announced she was having a house warming Friday evening at ten, and all were invited.

The meeting adjourned

June Sixteenth

A crowd had gathered for this weeks meeting, with many arriving early, to get good seating. There was less confusion as who was to sit where.

When the time for the meeting arrived, the Regent and his officers were still absent. Lady Savhanna took the floor, assuring the crowd that she had spoken to the Regent the day before, and he was planning on attending. The crowd setteled down some, and several council members at the table seemed impatient.

Lord Ishmael was once again questioning those persons that he thought looked suspicious. at the door.

A contingent of additional Dark Order forces arrived armored and armed as if for battle. Lord Ishmael met them at the door and refused them entry. This caused an exchange of "words" between Tarothin and Lord Ishmael. Lord Ishmael stood his ground, refusing entry to any additional Dark Order members. Lord Ishmael stated that the Dark Order were no friends of the Regency, and didn't follow the Virtues. Lord Ishmael also stated in a loud voice that if the Dark Order was admitted into the Regency, Serpents Hold would not only break all ties with the Regency, but would "actively stand against the Regency".

The Dark order insisted that these extra members were needed to protect the Queen, as was their duty. General Walter interceded and finally it was agreed that the Dark Order could have one guard on each door, if the Queen attended.

The Regent and his officers were still absent, and Lady Savhanna called for adjournment.

The crowd was reluctant to leave, with many remaining seated, waiting for the meeting to begin.

A group of drunken dwarves arrived and pushed into the hall, demanding to know where the ale was, General Walter attempted to diplomatically suggest they retire to a tavern, and he'd buy some drinks. This was too no avail, and the Dwarves wandered around the hall, insulting people, belching, ogling the ladies present, and generally acting with poor manners. The meeting broke up in chaos, and many decided it was time to retire for the evening.
